The Company has also announced the retention of Strategic Growth International, Inc. ("SGI"), as its investor relations consultant. SGI specializes in creating interest in undiscovered public companies worldwide and will assist CTX Virtual Technologies, Inc. in establishing worldwide exposure and relationships particularly with institutional investors.

The Company expects to begin the necessary audits and other requirements for the application to the OTC Bulletin Board or other senior exchange.

Founded in 1989, SGI is headed by Stanley Altschuler and Richard Cooper, two highly respected Wall Street veterans, who have assembled an experienced team of financial professionals that specialize in assisting emerging companies to create worldwide interest in the financial markets. Since its inception in 1989, Strategic Growth has achieved an unparalleled level of excellence and success, particularly with companies like CTX Virtual Technologies, who are leaders in advanced communications technologies.

Clifford M. Rhee, Chief Executive Officer of CTX Virtual Technologies, stated, "CTX has made significant progress in creating a suite of revolutionary technologies for more flexibility in imputing data in wireless devices, through its 'first of a kind' imbedded technologies. We are excited to be working with Strategic Growth International, Inc., who has great success with other pioneering technology companies like CTX. SGI's assistance will be invaluable in introducing CTX to institutional investors and generating market coverage."

"Strategic Growth is proud to be representing advanced technology companies like CTX Virtual Technologies, Inc. that has already established itself in the world's largest markets for communication devices in the U.S. and China," stated President Stan Altschuler of SGI.
